

6.3 DESIGN A LIST

DIRECTIONS: People love lists. You can even buy a book of lists or The Top 10 of Everything. While these can be great resources, the best lists are those that come from your reporter's sources and directly accompany an article such as the example below. Your task is more fun. Take one of your hobbies — scuba diving, guitar playing, hiking, whatever — then do a little research to develop a list of something related to that hobby. Design and create that list, keeping in mind the design fundamentals you've learned so far. Attribute your source.
