
About the Author

Sumitabha Das obtained a degree in electronics engineering from Calcutta University (1977). After serving as Deputy Director in the Ministry of Defence, he was lured by the world of UNIX into prematurely leaving his service in 1989. In 1993, his book on UNIX hit the Indian market, and in 2001, yet another one reached the US shores. Das has worked extensively on Oracle PL/SQL programming and has also taught Systems Programming (in C) and Java in his brief stint at Bengal Engineering and Science University. In 2006, at the behest of Dr. Ambedkar Institute of Technology, he accomplished the task of teaching Perl and Systems Programming (in C) to around 40 lecturers and professors located in and around Bengaluru. He eventually decided to write a book on C programming, long after everyone else had done their bit in an over-saturated market.
